NO. 5—HATS TO MATCH COSTUMES.

Woman's hair has always been referred to as her crowning glory, but in fashion lore we discover a close rival for this honor, namely, the chapeau. To the French women this means more than a hat; it is the frame which is most carefully selected to complete a perfect picture—the crowning glory of a beautiful gown. Like a frame, it should blend in with the costume, yet never call attention to itself to the exclusion of the dress it is intended to beautify.

Just at this time fashion has consented to a most unusual as well as economical departure in wash hats to match costume. These hats, of tub fabrics, can be had in very smart styles, and some of them are very beautiful. The majority of these hats are made in solid colors, and offer very little contrast to costumes. They are work for an artist, however, these simple appearing wash hats; for if they were not given all the attention of a silk or chiffon creation, they would be impossible. If one wishes to order a hat for a figured wash dress it is best to purchase a plain material to match the predominating color in the pattern. Then, again, a very effective scheme is to have a white voile or organdie hat made, with some small fancy or trimming of the material made into an ornament. In this way a woman can be the proud possessor of a hat for every costume, with small expense, as materials left over from dresses will probably prove sufficient for making a hat. Milliners as a rule do not charge more than $2.50 to $3.00 for making these hats, which appear quite chic, and still are economical.

White hats are always very much in vogue for summer wear, and white dresses of course are the thing to wear with them. A very good departure from the rigid white, however, is a hat with a black hemp facing, and solid white organdie crown; this hat should be of especial appeal to women with high coloring.

When the subject of silk and chiffon hats comes to us for consideration the answer is not difficult to find. Generally a hat and gown of the same material and color is considered good taste. But, in the millinery business, figured silks are classed much the same as figured cotton goods. It is much more satisfactory to wear a solid color hat with a figured gown. This does not apply to the silk or cotton sports goods. They are in a class by themselves, and hats to match skirts no matter how eccentric the pattern are considered quite "voguey."

A dark dress will appear less sombre when worn with a white hat, with perhaps just a suggestion of trimming the shade of the dress. Wearing shoes to match the hat is also quite a fad, indeed white shoes should never be worn with a dark dress unless the hat or some other part of the costume is also white. If a costume is entirely dark and white shoes are worn, particular attention is called to the feet of the wearer, and this is what most women would choose not to do. This fault can be remedied, however, by using white for collars or vestees.

A gown of navy blue foulard was given great distinction by the hat in the upper left hand corner. The crown of navy blue straw has a cluster of tiny spring fruits, and, as if to dare the food censor a whisp of wheat is tucked between them. The transparent brim of navy georgette hints darkly of Lady Duff Gordon's dainty light-peek-a-boo hats. If the hat had been made of foulard to match the gown, the costume as a whole would not have been nearly as pleasing, so, in this instance at least, a hat truly "made" a gown.

A little pink frock of georgette crepe was made doubly attractive by the leghorn hat in the lower left hand corner. The wide "brim" turns up roughly all around, and makes one wish to pull it down just to take a peek at the exquisite pink crown, with its tiny little pink and blue forget-me-nots. Sewn on in prim conventional groups, and as if to defy these conventions a soft little bow of pink velvet falls over the brim at the back.

With the summer frocks this season all ruffles, and ruffles on ruffles, nothing could be more charming than the dainty hat of voile and organdie in the upper right hand corner. The dress was made of figured voile with copenhagen blue dominating a tendency to grey. It was a smart little dress with straight loose lines, and just above the hem a shaped band was mounted with eight tiny ruffles of organdie in grey. These ruffles were stitched in copenhagen blue thread. The hat had a plain brim of blue voile with the underneath slightly shirred, and the little military looking helmet crown consists of tiny ruffles of organdie. These ruffles were also stitched in blue, and were held in place by small buttons of blue voile, with grey French knots in the center.

That hat in the lower right hand corner has a claim to distinction that is well deserved. When a woman thinks of a rose-colored gown or hat, she invariably thinks of black velvet as a contrasting trimming. The designer of this hat had a very different idea. It was made to wear with a pearl grey linen dress that had a stenciled design in several shades of rose on the hem, collar and belt. The rough coarse texture of this novelty rose color straw was a splendid contrast to the grey linen of the dress and to the soft grey gros grain ribbon which was used to bind the edge of the brim, as well as to trim the telescoped crown.

"TOG TALKS"

This article is Number 5 of a series of papers on practical dressmaking and millinery subjects, with special hints on profitable buying for wear in Hawaii. This new department is being conducted by Janet Walker, who, with several years of experience in dressmaking and with a wide knowledge of materials, patterns and values, brings to the work an unusually thorough equipment. All materials described in these papers may be purchased at the Honolulu shops and the aim is to furnish hints in an attractive, readable form for the women and girls of the city whether they make their own clothes in whole or in part, or buy at the tailors, the milliners, the dressmakers or the shops.

Among the later papers will be "Home Dyeing of White Goods," "The Best Types of Dresses for Small Women," "Best Types for Young Girls."

Friends of Miss Lulu Brown, who has been teaching in the Sandwich Islands, have received word that she will sail from Honolulu about June 26, and expects to arrive in this city about the first of July.—Turlock (Cal.) Journal.

Housewives To Be Registered In Food Drive

Five Thousand Pledge Cards, Badges and House Tags are Coming From Washington

Acting on a personal request from Herbert C. Hoover, national food administrator, the women's committee of the territorial food commission is preparing to begin a registration of all island housewives for national service, in the country-wide campaign for food economy.

In this work the territorial body will serve as a clearing-house for the national administration; it will attend to the distribution of the pledges, prepared in Washington and which women throughout the states are signing; and as housewives in the islands sign these and return them, the territorial organization will catalogue them and forward them to the headquarters in the East.

Women of Hawaii will sign the same pledges, receive the same badges and house tags as their sisters of the mainland are doing. One of the first to enroll in the national organization was Mrs. Wilson, wife of the President. As told in the Star-Bulletin yesterday, the wives of the President's cabinet members signed the pledges immediately after her.

These pledges, and the instructions sent with them from Washington, will be translated into several different languages and reprinted at Honolulu.

Dr. Dean, the food commission executive, has written to Mr. Hoover for an initial shipment of 5000 pledge cards, cards of instruction, badges and house tags. This supply should arrive within a month's time.

A Highlander chat on milk

Doctors and specialists tell us to-day that much of modern disease is caused by impure milk—hence, the greatest care should be exercised with regard to the quality of the milk used in the home.

In warm climates it is especially difficult to secure a high-grade pure milk of standard quality. It is here that Highlander Milk (full cream) offers such advantages.

It gives you pure, rich, germ-free milk of standard quality, from which only the excess water has been removed by evaporation in vacuo.

Highlander Condensed Milk is made from the purest, richest milk of specially selected herds in the rich pastures of Southland, New Zealand—a district famed the world over for its model dairies and the exceptionally high quality of its dairy produce.

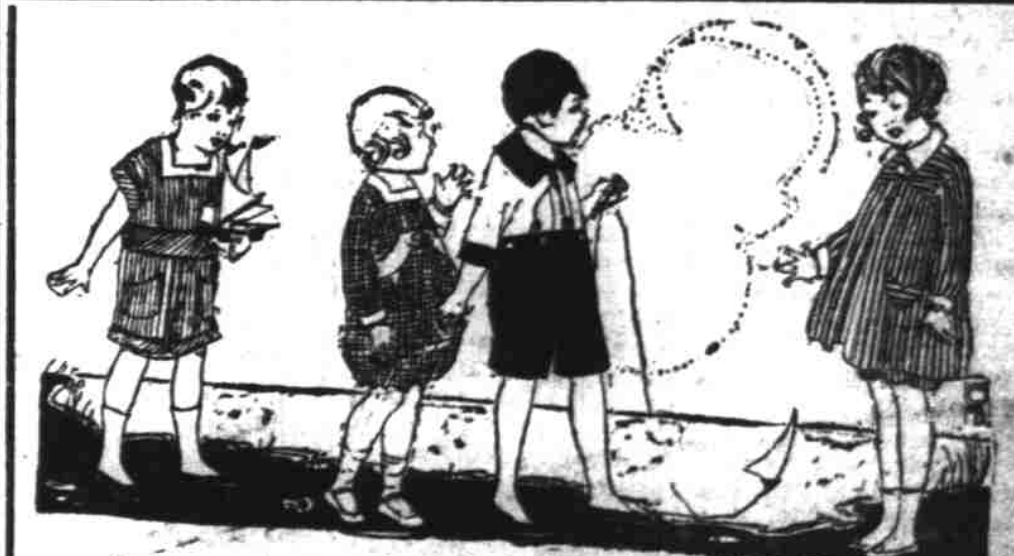

Highlander Condensed Milk challenges comparison with any brand prepared anywhere.

Why not test Highlander yourself? Get a tin to-day—use it in the home—use it for your cooking—try it in comparison with the brand you are now using, you'll readily admit its superiority as thousands of others have done.
